A Final Message as BCS Head

Last June, I decided to make this my final year as head of BCS. No, I am not retiring but I do feel that eight years has been long enough and that the tasks I was asked to undertake in 1995 have been completed. It is time for the School and me to move on and it was with these words that I said good-bye to you on June 21st at Graduation.

You should know that I will miss:

- Singing hymn 157 in St. Martin's Chapel – will I always know the words without having to look at the hymnbook?
- The excitement on Mrs. Evan's face as she gives me the first copy of Inscape
- Handing out certificates recognizing outstanding academic achievement to over a third of the school's population – not just once but every term!

On the other hand, I won't miss

- The oldest and coldest indoor rink in Eastern Canada

But I will miss

- Beating Stanstead in the oldest & coldest rink in eastern Canada!

I will miss

- Eating in a dining hall – not a cafeteria – cheese omelets on Fridays and peanut butter cookies still warm from the oven
- Learning about the stars and planets from Mr. Dutton in chapel
- Students singing hymns on bus trips
- The view from the top of Mont Orford
- Snow storms on Cross Country Running Day

Of course I won't miss

- Late night phone calls

I probably won't miss

- Proof-reading 250 reports in less than a day

Although I will miss

- Reading the teachers' comments and trying to write a meaningful one of my own to each of you

I will miss

- invitations to listen to our students in public speaking competitions –you express yourselves so well and are a receptive audience for one another
- Cadet Inspection and the admiration I have for all the students as you pull it off all on your own
- The beauty of a candlelit chapel at Christmas
- Standing under an umbrella at a soccer game and suddenly being the most popular person there – was it the umbrella or my personality that attracted those four students to spend half an hour talking to me?

I certainly won't miss

- Driving to Montreal three times in a week

I will miss

- Making a Christmas shoe box and knowing that the students will end up delivering over 400 to sailors each December
- Walking into the local drug store and being told by the cashier how glad she is to see BCS students back after the summer
- Stoker Arts Festival where students create works of art with their hands, with their feet, with their voices and with their minds

I doubt that I will miss

- Asking students to tuck in their shirts, tighten up their ties, button down their button down collars, unroll their kilts, pull up their socks – although I do it a lot less at BCS than I likely would at most other schools

I will miss

- The challenge of learning the names of 100 new students each September
- My biology class
- The students who have discovered the dish of mints in my office
- Attending the launch of First Fruits and receiving the accolades that go with having over one third of the work having been submitted by BCS students

I cannot say that I will miss

- Standing in the cold at the Cenotaph in Lennoxville on Armistice Day – it always seems to rain or sleet or snow

But I will miss

- The Armistice Day parade in Lennoxville and the Black Watch Church parade in Montreal – BCS Cadet Corps #2 certainly sparkles at times like these

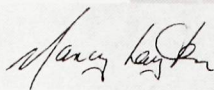

Every June I will miss

- The final Chapel service and the Graduation ceremonies

And I am sure you will understand when I say that I won't miss

- Travelling without Joe

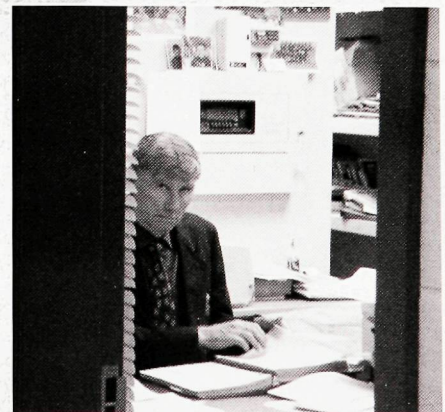

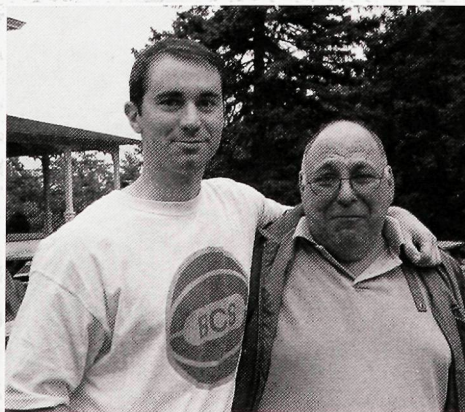

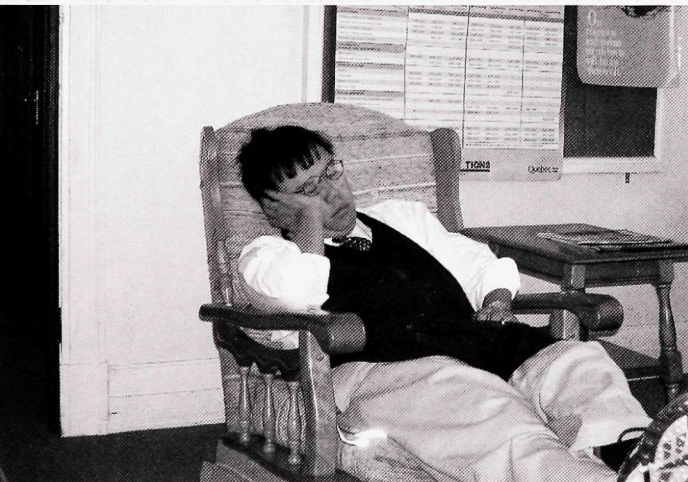

Most of all, I will miss the feel of BCS – the warmth and generosity of so many people be they students, alumni, parents, friends and especially the staff but I am hoping that I won't have to miss feeling a part of this community and that I will be a welcome visitor for many years to come. Thank you one and all for enriching my life this year and throughout my tenure as Head of BCS – I do feel very lucky indeed.

PREFECTS 2002-2003

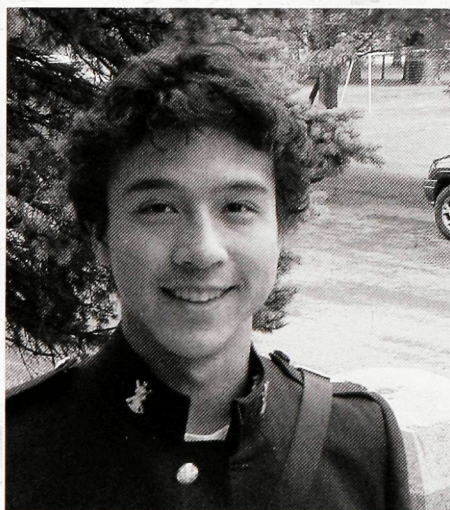

The Sound of Music (The Prefects Version)

"Together!"

Do, a deer, Jeewon's a dear,
Rae, a touch of Stephanie,
Mi, a Meg, we call her Megan,
Far, an Armen far away,
So, Youna's pulling thread,
La, Eric's following Youna,
Ti, a drink with Yun-Ping Lee
That will bring us back to Ma-jor Turner

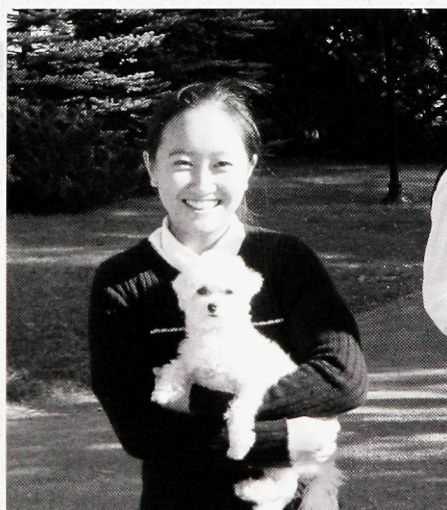

Do Mi Mi,
Mi So So,
Rae Fa Fa,
La Ti Ti,

When you know Ma-dame St-Jacques,
You will love her evermore.

Eric Inoue

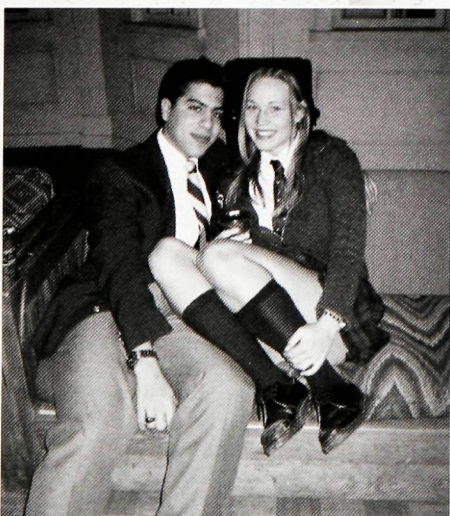

He juggles fire, he acts, he studies, he travels, he smiles, works, he Prefects, he watches out for younger kids, he's a snappy dresser, he wants to fly, he reads in Chapel, he dances, he leads, he plays soccer, hockey, climbs, he lives in McNaughton, he speaks parciel tongue.... Okay I'm not sure about the last one. But all the world's a stage, and here is one of the finest jesters, dare I say, finest actors to grace the BCS stage. He'll be missed. Always pack a towel eric, the Guide says so....

Youna Zhang

Youna is just a perfect Prefect to have around. Though her height may make it difficult to spot, she is always behind the scenes helping everybody accomplish their goals; whether it be auctioning herself off in the Dining Hall, or organizing the greatest party of the year. Youna's perceptiveness sees things for what they really are, which is why she is not shy of living her life to the fullest. Her motto, today may be the last, so be it, she'll live it, and she'll not ever complain.

Eric

Armen Bakirtzian

Armen...never a Turk. Armenian pride represent! 'Twas fun in class, especially the candid talks, the huge rip in your pants, and you knowing my intolerance for certain people. Never forget the Chem study sessions on the balcony...the sound of music...ABC...the secret bus trip idea that we got jacked...your willingness to do the prayer...raiding the peanut butter cookies before Physics in the Prefect's room... Promise me a ride in your new G35 coupe! And I'll be looking for your cruise ships later on ... in the future.

Steph

Jeewon Kim

Jeewon is a Prefect and one of the best students at BCS. She works extremely hard to achieve her dream, which is to make one of the top ten American universities. Jeewon participated in Senior Boys Hockey and Senior Boys Rugby, she became the best manager and the "cutest cheerleader". Outside of the classroom, Jeewon has a lot of respect from the younger Korean students, and she is also one of the happiest girls in Seventh Form, because recently she's also fallen in love! Jeewon is sweet, nice, responsible, and clever, and has no problems to accept two totally different cultures in her life. I would like to suggest she smile more, and be more optimistic, because this could make her more than perfect!

Yun-Ping

Stephanie Broadhurst

When Steph beat the train in Lennoxville and came through the Chapel doors before 8:25, she was a unique and colorful addition to the group of Prefects of 2002-2003. Her immaculate dancing and rhythm skills made her an enjoyable person to be around. Although she was never on campus because of athletics and other commitments, she was a great help whenever we needed her. Thanks Steph.

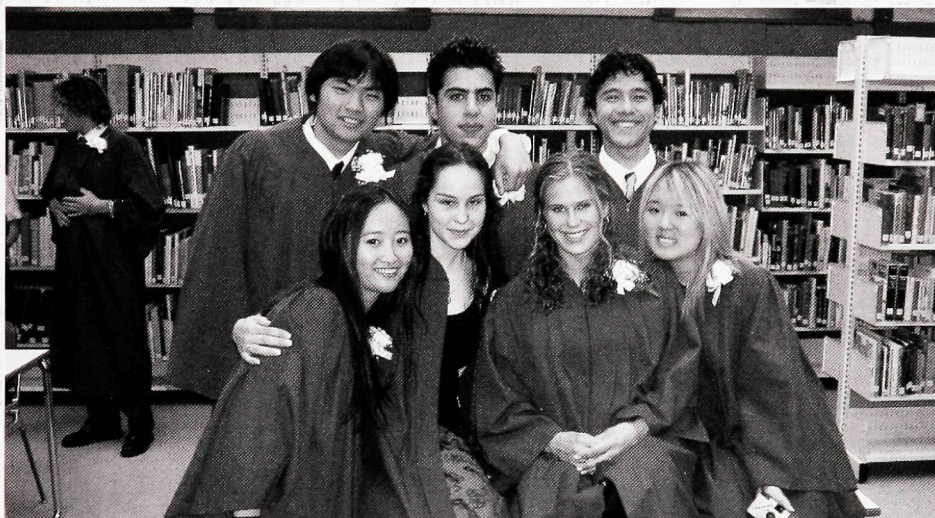

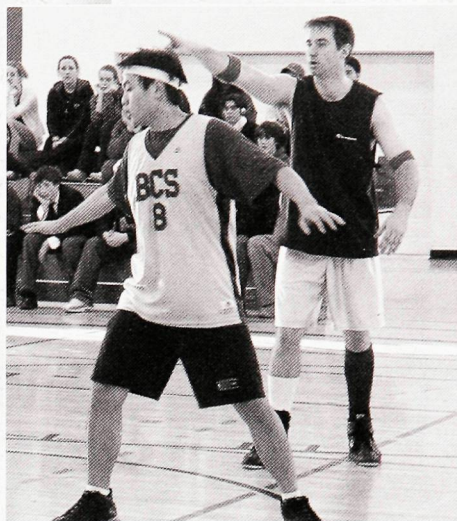

Armen

Yun-Ping Lee

AKA Pinger, our basketball star Prefect, is always willing to be there to help out anyone. Even though there were many times he was late for Chapel and was depreffected, he always ended up coming back just as happy as ever. Oh wait! Maybe you just always forgot about us! How can we ever forget his basketball announcements? "Good morning everyone, yesterday we had a game against Richmond and we beat them so badly..." Or maybe his after-Chapel greeting: "Have a super wonderful day." There isn't a day that we don't see him smile. If he's not smiling, it's because he was asked by Mr. Hackett to stay at school and finish his work instead. Oh, and don't forget, he absolutely loves to SLEEP!!!

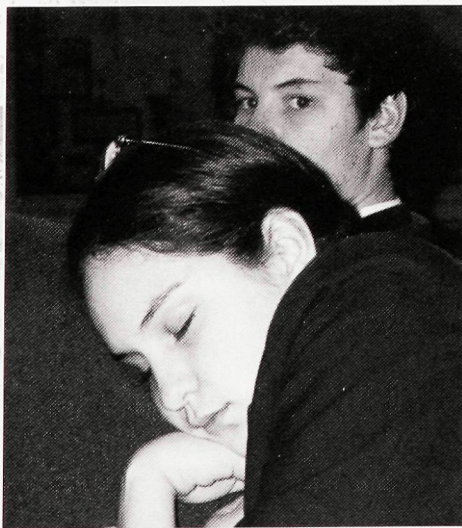

Jeewon

Megan Irving

AKA Megamactara Irvingston. She is our favorite creative Prefect, certainly bound to become the next female Billy Collins. It's okay if she didn't do well in Finite, because Billy wrote to her! Yeh! And of course she knows EVERYONE's names when she makes announcements, with her own distinctive "fingers pointing", without the slightest pronunciation of names. Sweatpants, darn it! For a period of one day, Megan was our own little Maria. What a great leader she was! We won't forget her phone "accidentally" ringing in Chapel, and especially everyone else's eyes turning towards her. Way to go Megs! Cookies anyone? Oh yah, Megan for sure! It should be called the Attack of the Cookies. If you look carefully, there are still crumbs left in her right blazer pocket...The only word for her is WONDERFUL!

HOUSES

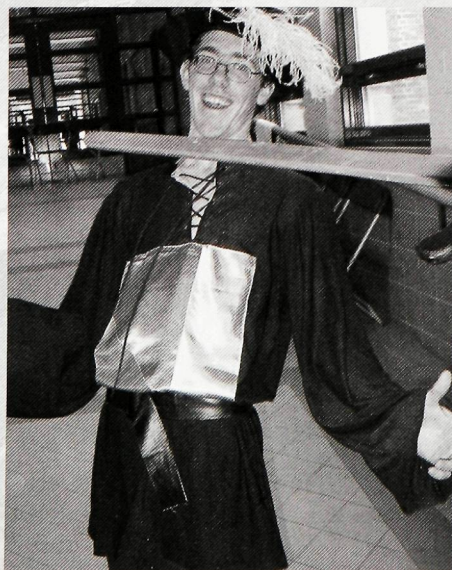

15:10 — The afternoon bell tolls its dissonant wail, and a horde of students flood the Ross House area, slowing all other traffic to a crawl. Jonathan can be glimpsed in a corner, trying to strangle Stas after the latter poked him one too many times.

A whale enters.

The signal is given, and seven lockers burst open, revealing the grotesquely painted faces of Shawn, Nic, Julien, James, Luke, and the Hai Brothers, (which one is which?!?) who rush out and encircle the intruder, chanting the savage litany made famous in Golding's 'Lord of the Flies'. This is our elite drill team of munchkins, our most tightly kept secret.

Chris Durrant leaps into the fray in a desperate attempt to restore order and perhaps save the errant whale. "Stop!" he cries, "I love the whale!" Well, this has the desired effect. The chanting stops abruptly, and seven heads swivel to face a drained Chris. At this point in time, a crevice opens up right smack in the middle of the floor and Antoine emerges, a flaming red cushion in hand. Contemptuously, he flings the cushion at Chris, hoping to start some sort of pillow fight. Chris hurtles back through the thick windows of Ross and somehow lands on the bike rack where he lies unconscious, his glasses smashed on the unforgiving pavement. At this point, the whale flees and the hunters send their best runner, Forrest, to give chase. P.A. (affectionately known as 'Pas Anglais') follows suit on his skates, hot on the scent.

Now, while all this is happening, Antoine hands Gabriel a black cowl and robe, and the two disappear into the darkness of the closing abyss.

An eerie silence descends upon a subdued commonroom. Until... the distant sound of goose-stepping is heard. Sergeant Amyot enters, Chris Harvey and Richard in tow. As one, they announce that "By decree of Comrade Captain Travis cough all bright and energetic young Turks are to be drafted into the ranks of the tentative 'Fourth Reich'." And off they go, Iskender in tow, mumbling something about The Simpsons.

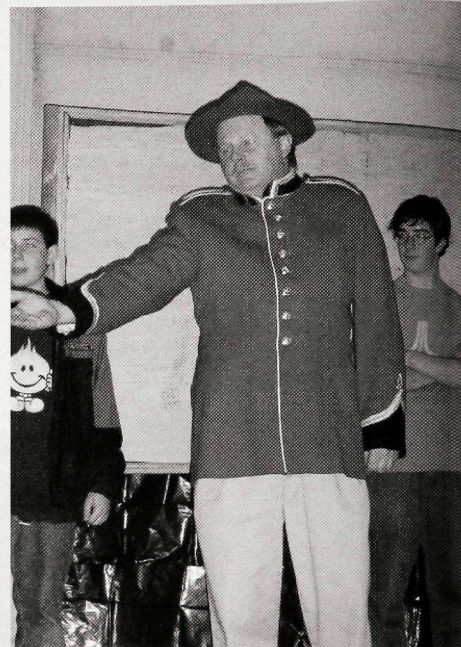

Now, the thoroughly shaken inhabitants of Ross can only stare as Russell wanders in, very conspicuously donning his jacket and then sprinting out again. Shuni and Pinger decide that this would be an ideal moment to start a game of pickup basketball... As lights smash and rain down in an infinite volley of tiny glass shards, Ugo and Josh enter. Unfortunately, they are incapable of putting a stop to this chaotic mess because Jess and Jeewon dart in and tow them back to wherever again.

Devanand now enters, and sits at the filthy table we so love, trying to finish his homework before crease. But Sergeant Tim, who should have been busy goose-stepping with the rest, flies into an inexplicably sudden and extremely random fit of homicidal rage pops up from behind the couch, trying to whack a bewildered Devanand with the splintered Ross House Spirit Stick.

Colin, perhaps the most responsible house captain, tears his gaze from the one dubbed 'unfurnable' long enough to disengage Tim from a terrified Devanand, and then returns to his locker only to gaze malevolently at nothing in particular.

Charles darts furtively from one unconscious form to another then runs out again. We're still not too sure why. Now Danny walks in and heads to the window, on the lookout for Hewson, his father.

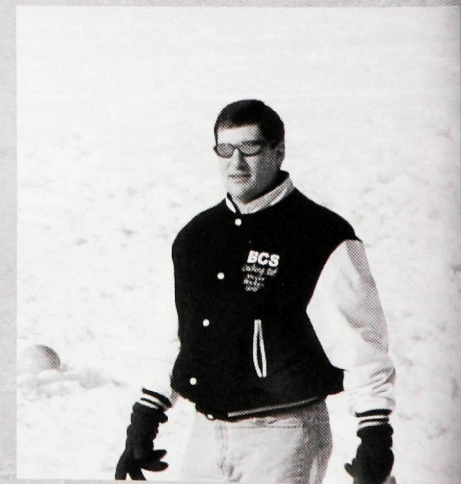

He spots a now-stirring Chris below, and leans out further to confirm the truth of this spectacle. Alas, Danny leans out too far and the disproportionate weight of his head encountering that mysterious and compelling force known as 'gravity' drags him right out the window. Somehow, he manages to rejoin Chris on the bike rack.

Meanwhile, the shattered lights have ignited the peeling green paint on the lockers, and Ross House suffers its first electrical fire.

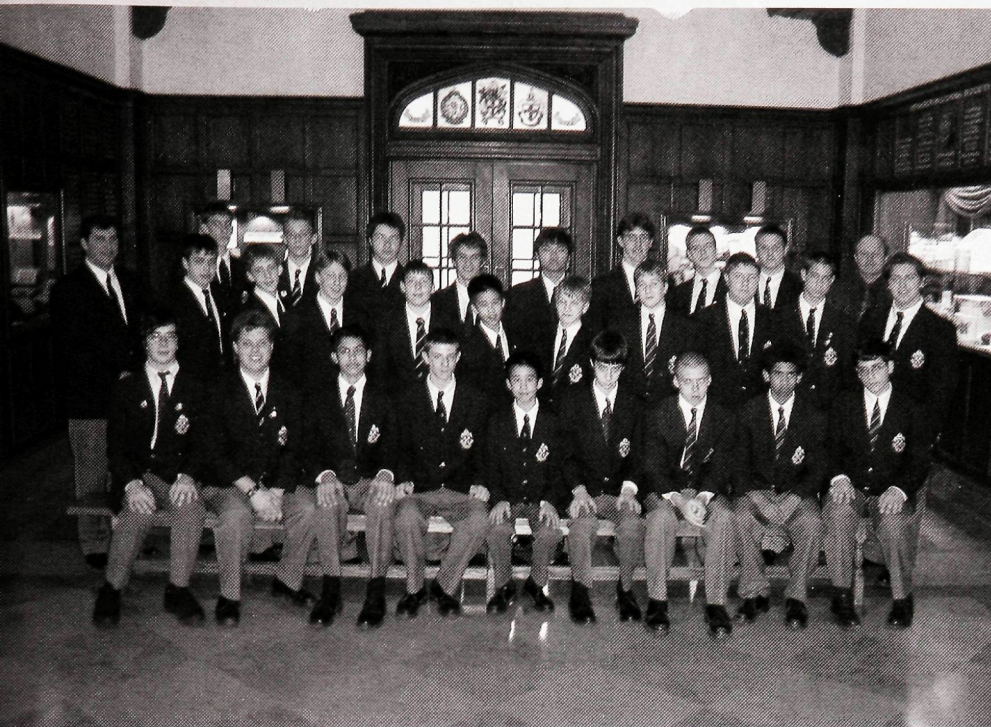

Smoke billows forth from the shattered windows of what was once the posh student retreat known as Ross House. Spent bodies are strewn on sullied tiles, and off in the distance the lilting cry of a whale is heard. The clock strikes 15:30.

Russell saunters in with a goofy grin pasted to his face, finally back from his 'Nature Walk', and lets loose a diabolical peal of laughter.

At this juncture in time, it is safe to wonder what exactly happened to our two Houseparents, Messrs. Bray and Dutton. They were around, rest assured. They managed to wander in just in time to save our posh retreat from total annihilation. However, allow us to press upon you, the reader, that this is merely a grossly over-exaggerated scenario. Although Ross House may at times be quite chaotic and dystopic, we must never forget that it has always been and always will be the girls who are the rowdiest.

Grier South

Summarizing a whole year of experiences is not very easy. Here were some of the highlights that Grier South came up with which will keep us all laughing for years to come:

Hair Colors: We saw all colors and shades. Myung Kuk seemed to perfect the art, coloring his flawlessly, and always finding the time to help others color theirs.

Noodle Buffet: Any Asian restaurant would jump at the chance to have Joon or Roger cook for them. Their meals attracted more customers than any restaurant in Lenn.

Sleeping: Some of us did it better than others. Derek and Andy were actually offering lessons by the end of the year for those who had not yet mastered falling asleep anywhere at anytime in any position.

Let There be Sight: We did our part at supporting the Lennoxville eye doctor. Almost every student lacking 20/20 either ripped a contact or broke their glasses. Diego had the most contact orders, and almost never had two lenses in at the same time.

Eating: From Kuy Hun's suitcase chalk full of Mexican "candy" (sand mixed with spices) and Christian's holiday packages to the bags of "special" rice and the depaneur operating out of Jamie and Fahad's bedroom, we could have easily put Provigo out of business. And how can we forget Jae Hong's bedtime snack of canned tuna, and Mr. Faucher's favorite, seaweed? Mmmmm.

Common Room Activities: Whether it was a hockey game or a movie night, did Yann ever stop twirling the pillow on his finger? Monica's Cookies and Hakim playing guitar (when Hakim could find his guitar underneath his layers of clothes).

Acting 101: While we all had our fifteen seconds of "fame" during carnival, Mike and Mr. Rae were the only ones who really got to show off their talents at the school play.

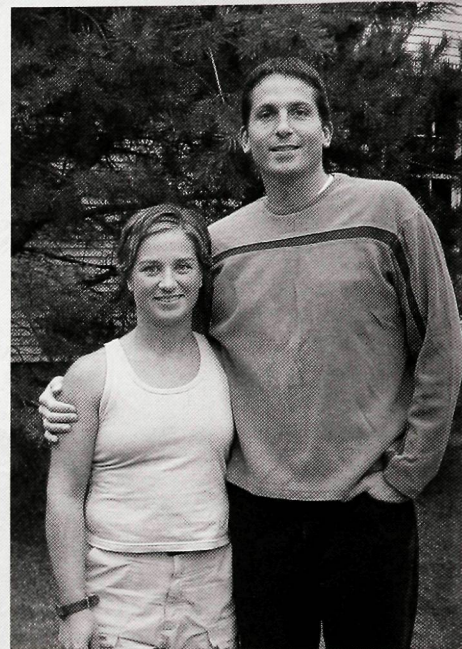

Noise: Most would agree that the most frequently heard noise echoing through the hallways in South is the sound of computer games and the constant firing of machine guns. When the computers are turned down, then you will hear Seung either laughing: "Ahhhhh", or reciting one of his favorite lines from the Jerky Boys: "I am going to call the police!"

Mornings: Everyone wakes up his own way in Grier South. Hisashi is up before the sun, listening to softly played classical music. Some of us did not get up until minutes before chapel...even after chapel at times!

Winter for Southerners: Miss. Lane tried to convince us that wearing a hat and gloves wasn't half bad, but most of the time we underdressed and would speed walk to the schoolhouse. Loïc helped us all through the winter blues by providing coconut milk, beach pictures, and tales from the tropics whenever necessary.

Injuries: Juan Pablo takes the cake in this department, followed closely by Peter. Between the two of them they survived one concussion, a broken hand, a sprained ankle, a pulled calf, a strained quad, several sprained fingers, and a thumb joint that is made of play dough. Several students also suffered from mild hypothermia after Mr. Daigle "ice cold water in the shower" trick.

Friendships: We ranged from 3rd to 6th form, 13 to 18 years old, and out of 20 students we represented 9 different countries. We will never live under the same roof again, but the relationships we have made will last a lifetime.

GRIER SOUTH HOUSE

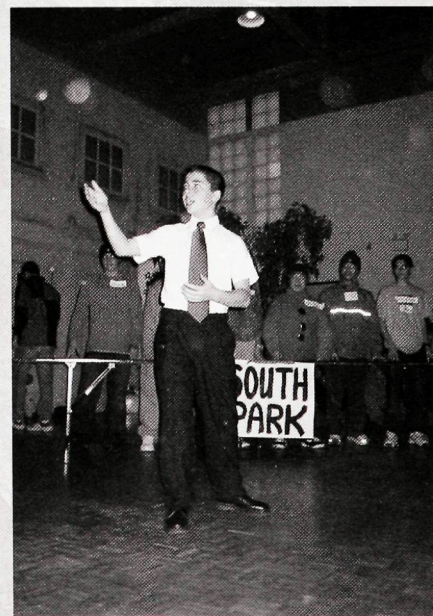

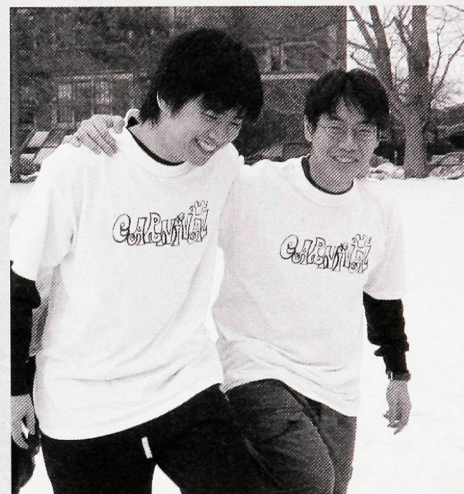

First Row: Ms. M. Schaffer, M.K. Hwang, H. Jang, H.J. An, R. Hua, Y. Guillou Arango, C. Heyerhoff, D. Marquez

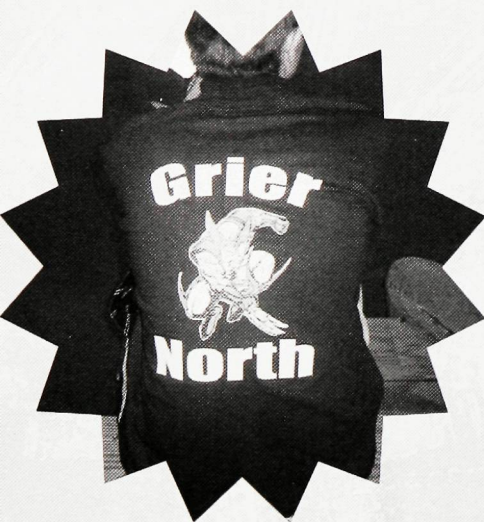

Second Row: Mr. D. Rae, J.H. Chung, J. Scott, H. Ohara, B.H. Kahng, M. Artus, D. Yan, F. Al Sabah, H.S. Kang, K.H. Koh Yoo, L. Durand, A. Ewing, Ms. J. Lane

A Note from the Houseparents: Thanks for a wonderful year guys. We could not have asked for a better group of students to have in Grier South. Here are some of our favorite memories from the year:

Mr. Porger • Shut/Zip/Shhht • Andy's Dollar Store (5 dollars for all three items) • "Hey guys, is my wife here?" • Birthday Parties • Movie Nights • Early Prep • The siren after NHL goals • "I need a sheet" • Chapagheti • Tim Horton's • The Skit • The Common Room • Pizza nights • "Hey Mr. Faucher, I need some hot water for my noodles!"

J.D., or Mr. Future P.M., was a model citizen. He'll have to practice his lying and cheating skills if he ever wants to make it in politics. Unfortunately, I won't have any dirt to tell when he's running for office. Considering the late-night movies Gurme's been enjoying, you'd think he'd be better at human bio. I never realized that Ki Baek was such a fine photographer. I particularly enjoyed his incriminating photo essay entitled The Stupid Things We Do When Leger Isn't Around. Zahmat discovered that his family was moving to Tunisia. He seemed upset about the move. He later admitted his tears were caused by the thought of leaving his true home – Smith House. When I first welcomed J.C. to B.C.S., he was with his sister M.J. I introduced them to J.D. and his brother P.L. Apparently they were all members of F.W.A.N. (Francophones With Abbreviated Names). In the end, J.C. turned out to be a real J.E.R.K. (Joyful, Enthusiastic, Rollicking Kid). Half German, half Italian...is it any wonder that Jacob ruled as a ruthless House Captain? Actually, he was a real sweetheart (just ask Erin). Tiger was very different compared to last year. He was always smiling and laughing, and acting goofy...no, wait a second...that was Chewy. We were shocked when Chewy claimed his father was Kim Jong-il, North Korea's diminutive dictator. Come to think of it, they did have similar hairstyles. Myles' cheesy grin, girlish giggle, and bubbly energy earned him a special place in my heart. I really loved having Mike, I mean Myles, around. Pierre-Luc went through three roommates: First there was Jon and the humming fridge; then the quiet and clean Mat; and finally, the hyperactive Ben Davies from England. P.L. eventually got his own room...The others ended up needing psychotherapy. Jon's gargantuan shoe size earned him the nickname Sideshow. He was very disappointed when a small Cuban family used one of his b-ball shoes to sail away in. I want to see some I.D...there is no way that Mathieu should have been in Form V. He was more mature and responsible than most people in their thirties (including moi). Carlos Guasch was a real stud. He told me that he always had beautiful girls around him. "Hey, Carlos, posters don't count." Charlie was one of the best football players I had ever seen...of course playing Madden every night for six hours helped develop his thumb-eye coordination. Brendan joined us late in the year. He would have been here sooner, but he walked too dang slow. "Yo, Brendan, whatup G?" Hey, do you think he'll still be talking like that when he's 25? The other part-timers were: Ben "the Original Ben" Towler, Stephan "Slim" Meier, Stuart "Crazy-Cross-Dresser" Van der Veen, Jamie "The Convict" Cowell, and Julien "The Blitz" Fritz. As for the houseparents, this year was so great that they're thinking of having another 19 kids of their own. Thanks for an awesome year, guys! Wait! Logan wants to say something – "CACA!"

Since very few of you ever actually come to our little paradise on the edge of the BCS experience, we volunteer this tour: On any given day, if you were to walk into Chapman, this is what you might experience. The long flight of stairs before our chaotic arrangement of shoes and the notice board which we never use. After passing the downstairs bathroom, you will come to a major intersection of activity. To the left there might be two or three girls, standing outside Cale's room, watching him watch South Park episodes on his computer. To the right you will find the door to the Chapman King's lair, where the bravest of us descend to borrow films. In our common room, the guy on the couch, referred to as Sean, is always there to open tuck and corrupt our young impressionable minds with his well articulated opinions. The other regulars are those happy little snots with no serious work yet: Jimmy and William. Their banter often drowns out the sound of the television, and they are ignored by Danny who is cooking noodles for Brian in our little kitchen. If you decide to drive straight through the intersection, you will come to the K and K room, where an entire horde of geeks a.k.a. the Ross boys and some little Pun from McNaughton, is faithfully listening to instructions read out loud by the barbarian dungeon master himself, our lifer Karl. In the same room, a lost island of Japanese culture is juggling his math with his technological pursuit of happiness (msn). Moving on, you might catch Mr. D playing free cell on our archaic computer while conversing cheerfully with the TOD (Holland, Jackson, or V-Man). Room 3 is occupied by a pair of sexy beasts who might be writing this article. While one is probably furiously concentrating on his chem. or writing songs on his red guitar, the other flip flops between food, work, with his hours. Now, finally, we come to Chucky C's palace of hip hop. Freestyle rap sessions on the weekend and the highly technical creation of beats make this small room Chapman's beating (literally) heart. He's also notorious for very passionate telephone conversations which sometimes last hours.

There you go people, that's our house, we're the most laidback crew on this campus, and our location rocks. It's been a good year, peace out from Chapman!

and the basketball game online. Up the stairs, to the left, Brian is scowling over his work or fending off the ladies pursuing him on msn. Across from him is the ghetto of Chapman, Carson's room. Ignore the degrading pictures of scantily clad females and you will find a generous, thrill seeking, happy go lucky goof. He is also currently in more debt than most third world countries. Down the hall to the left is the silent pensive type, Eddie. Noteworthy for his snow-skiboarding skills and his dedication to the Chapman snow-park, he also has an eye for the girls. His roommate is Steve Coderre who might never be done

I am an ever present ghost in Smith... I watch Mr. Kelso duck under the door to cheerfully greet me and ask whether I'm interested in a Round Square exchange to some unheard of country. I see David head towards North, looking for Zahmat – the unofficial resident of this place. I head downstairs to see Ryan sharing the couch with Carolyn, both hands on the X-Box controller, as Mr. Liverpool, after a couple of hours of Jeopardy reruns, is sleeping like a baby – sometimes passing gas like one. I walk into the kitchen to see Julian play NBA Street and beat on P.Love simultaneously. I encounter the devious Mr. Fines, as he announces lights out and holds a conversation with Vince in an emphatic French spoken at light speed. Before I leave the kitchen, I see Tom making his third batch of microwave popcorn this hour. Heading back upstairs, I see Jay and Arjun mini-putting down the hall, while Fahim serves as a violently quivering, heavily caffeinated obstacle. Half way up the stairs, I see Mr. Crowther correcting incomprehensible essays... no wait a minute... those are Carnival skits! Upstairs, I hear the unmistakable punk rock strains coming from Vince's room, as he is in deep concentration over his science homework. The noise is disturbing Paul's nap, but he takes the time to reset his Pepsi cam before gently drifting off into daylight slumber. There isn't anyone else upstairs. Where are they? Pablo and Kevin are at Esso, or somewhere across the bridge. Jim, the Yoda of Smith, is probably in town with his wife and kids, day job and grown up life. Daniel? The coma olympics are in a month and he needs the training. Lonely, I head back to first floor. Steve is in the videogame cave, mastering Zelda on Game Cube. Tae Won is messaging his girlfriend – he did leave her over fifteen minutes ago! Imanol is quietly reading in...whatever language he speaks... How old is this guy? Matthew AKA

Jones is in his room, eating Thai noodles and chillin Berm style, daydreaming of large fish. Someone left a loaf of bread on his doorstep though, so Jones lept through the window, that Arjun cleared all the glass out of earlier. Greg walks past, the Spielberg of plays...okay the Hitchcock of plays...no sorry, the Russ Meyer of plays. Patrick's hummingbird sugar high is wearing off and the House breathes a collective sigh of relief.

4 years in BCS gave me an great opportunity to learn many things & changed me a lot in many good ways. Thanx 2 my bros(Zahmat, Pablo, Yayo, Pun, DD, Jim, Dan...), my girls (Barbs, Care, Isa, Em, Jimena, Stella...), the best house parent Mr. Kelso & Smith Ppl. I will miss U all & keep the great memories we had...

Jean-Christophe Parisien-La Salle

The year went by fast thanks to the J-Crew. That little hill was memorable and so were all the spirits after. Untamable blatter man you're a cool guy. As for the golfer, you're not bad except I owe you a dent. Pete, Armen, down with chem, you're goodfellas. For all the others, thanks and good luck

So much happened this year, and Im supposed 2 summarize it in 3 sentences, thats ridiculous. So, G1 & Linz, u brought me the most amazing year of my life, between the fights, porn, stealing, & procrastination, I made my 2 bestfriends. Thanks 2 MI, EN, JD, NN, UL, PL, TB, and everyone else who had to put up with my sh!

As another year passes by, I reflect upon the lessons learned, the people met, and the inspiration found: Thank you to the many friends who have made this year so successful; endless love to my family; thank you

BCS for giving me another chance. "If you want to predict the future, then create it."
